

Chapter VII. Footnotes

1. V. Lenin, Imperialism, op.cit., p. 16.
2. Ernest Mandel, Introduction to the Marxist Economic Theory, p. 45.
3. K. Marx, Capital, Vol. I, p. 626.
4. Statistical Abstract of Israel, 1965, No. 16, p. 415, and Israel Year Book, mentioned by Nikitina, op.cit.
5. Ibid.
6. Economic Quarterly - Israel, 197?, computed from figures in Tables S/SS.
7. From Statistical Abstract of Israel, No. 26, 1975.
8. Documented by Paula Raymon in "A Study of Kibbutz' Role in National Development," unpublished Ph.D. thesis, Boston College, Department of Sociology, December, 1976.
9. Lenin, cited in Kemp, op.cit., p. 18.
10. From a Report by Israel Shahak, the Chairman of Israel's League for Human Rights, based on Davar, April 22, 1977.
11. I learned about this from Noam Chomsky, who had personally witnessed this debate in kibbutz Hazore'a in 1953.
12. Abraham Daniel, "Inter-kibbutz Co-operation in Industry," in Landau et al. (eds.), Rural Communities, op.cit., p. 157.
13. Ibid.
14. Ibid.
15. Abraham Yassour, "The Danger of Industrial Success of the Kibbutz -- Discouraging Observations of a Non-professional Spectator," in Rural Communities, Landau et al. (eds.), op.cit., p. 149.
16. Samuel Pohoryles, "Economic Diversification in Israeli Villages," in Ibid., p. 87.
17. See Raanan Weitz, "Non-agricultural Co-operative Villages," in Rural Communities: Inter-co-operation and Development, by Y.H. Landau, M. Konopniki, H. Desroche, and P. Rambaud (eds.); Praeger Special Studies in International Economics and Development, London.
18. Brian Van Arkadie, Benefits and Burdens..., Carnegie Report, 1977.